When I worked with Dave it was called Solo. His son and my son where in the same grade. I know how he worked two jobs so he could give his children everything he could. Dave also faced a few forks in his life that I hope he finally overcame. Please keep in mind It is not in people's nature to change. Although loss is not comfortable, it can provide an amazing marker in life for incredible transformation. Look for the lessons to be learned in your situation about yourself and in life. What can you do to overcome and survive? Vow to use your loss situation to generate the energy to become more. You can be defined by your past, or refined by your past. Seek to serve others and value the gift of life in a way that you never knew before. Your father, friend, and manager would want the best for all who knew him. I know he is with Robert today catching up with time loss way to young for the both of them.

Sending condolences & prayers to the Bennett family. Dave was a good man he will definitely be missed. He was my supervisor at Dart Container/ Solo Cup for many years. When he called you into his office, you knew it wasn't for a petty issue. He was straight forward with the issue. I appreciated that. Dave you were one of the "good guys".
